

The new fax regulations are going too far. The onerous provision about having written permission unless you have a prior business relationship is not realistic. People have to have a way to communicate in business. The written permission takes too long and adds a lot of unnecessary red tape. Here's a suggestion: If a business gets an unwanted fax there should be a mechanism to notify that company not to send any more faxes. If they do, THEN there should be a punishment. First give people a chance!!
